-You did a wonderful job for us, thank you.

-I would like to thank this agency, Consumer Credit Counseling Service, for the help they have given me. I have mostly spoken with A.M. who has been extremely helpful, professional, but most of all has treated me very kindly while helping me with this course and my difficulties. He is doing an excellent job as an agent representing this company and has been extremely helpful to me in this most distressing time. This is a wonderful course that I would suggest to anyone through this company. Professional while being compassionate at the same time is not something everyone is gifted with and I feel fortunate that he is one of those people. This company has my sincere appreciation for what they are doing and the manner in which they are doing it. "Thank You" for being there for me. Blessings and Warm Smiles

-This course was very informative and I am glad I took it. However, my situation is very different from most. One big issue that I think is very often a problem is two very different married individuals, the spender and the saver. How do two people who otherwise love each other resolve these differences? Obviously, the saver has the more realistic and potential for financial security, but compromise is a real issue. Ideally, one would marry someone with similar "goals", but what seems similar at first can become polar opposites in ten or fifteen years. I think many divorces are as a result of financial disagreements and people end up financially destroyed. Also, my situation is complicated. My husband and I owned a successful business for twenty years. We had all the normal challenges and worked very hard to meet them. Our friend and account for eighteen of these years seemed dedicated and helpful for most of these years. Then he became involved in questionable business ventures and to our horror we discovered he had misused our social security numbers, business tax ID numbers, deceived our bank (with which we had a $900,000 line of credit) and obviously deceived us as well. This resulted in our losing our business, our credit, our good reputation. Needless to say we have been financially devastated and betrayed beyond belief. He is currently serving his fifth. of twelve years in Federal Prison, for financial crimes that did not even include his crimes against us. We trusted this person and now are suffering the consequences and trying to persevere as best we can. I am going to study your other courses on rebuilding credit, identity theft and anything else that may help. Please forward proof that I have completed this course immediately, if possible, as I waited until the last day, literally, and need to submit proof to the court on Monday, tomorrow. Thank You!
